Letter: Adams is right for state representative

To the editor:

After failing in my efforts to win the Republican nomination for state representative in the 17th Essex District, I took a few days to regroup from the long campaign and to give some thought as to who I would support in the November election.

It would be a mistake to assume that simply because I am a registered Republican that I would automatically support the Republican nominee. I take my vote very seriously and a candidate, regardless of party affiliation, must earn my support. Over the past six months, Paul Adams has done just that and I intend on voting for him on Nov. 2.

While Paul and I do not agree on every issue, we agree on the most pressing issues facing the Commonwealth today. We agree that we must change the direction and climate on Beacon Hill in order to create jobs, reduce the tax burden on families and businesses and limit the intrusion of government in our daily lives.

I also know Paul to be devoted and hardworking when it comes to issues he believes in. He has committed himself to this campaign; walking the district's neighborhood, listening to voters and addressing the issues facing every day citizens. I have every reason to believe that Paul will work just as hard once elected.

The 17th Essex District deserves somebody who will look out for our interests. That is why I ask you to join me in voting for Paul Adams on Nov. 2.
